

Innovation: A Unique Place to 'Return To Home'

Research and development, manufacturing, testing and sales. Why not do it all in one place?

Loudoun is the closest county to D.C. where you can have the best of all worlds. With a testing facility in Western Loudoun, the opportunity for a customized flex industrial space in Eastern Loudoun, Class-A office space that's Metro-adjacent, and some of the most educated workforce in the U.S., Loudoun is the perfect place to land your business and launch your success.

Xelevate Unmanned Systems Center of Excellence opens up massive opportunities for UAV testing close to home. The 66-acre property includes testing fields, a conference and training center, and flexible demonstration space. The training center is specifically geared toward contractors and government agencies, not hobbyists.

By having your whole process in one location, you can keep your team on the same page. Research and testing can inform the sales process. Customers can easily see your innovation in action and provide feedback to your manufacturing team. Each direct interaction helps shorten the time to market and save your business money.
